About Gilbert

Gilbert grew up in Armagh, Northern Ireland, and holds an honours degree in Modern Languages from Queen's University Belfast, where he also did research and trained as a teacher.

In 1995 he left his role as Head of Modern Languages at a local grammar school to devote himself to Bible teaching and church planting, and has taught widely at conferences and churches in Ireland and overseas.

Now retired from his staff role at Glenabbey Church, he divides his time between Bible teaching, writing and family, and is a keen landscape photographer on the Causeway Coast.

Gilbert is the brother of the world-renowned mathematician John Lennox.
